Rahway and Perth Amboy, last night with her at throat cut from ear to ear and her head feargully bruised.

At 3:15 this morning a freight train on the Central rairoad of New Jersey stopped at Perth Amboy. When it started ahead two strange men were on board. The conductor clod them to get off, but they refused to do so and behaved in such a peculiar manner that the conductor began to suspect that they had done something wrong and were very anxious to get away from Perth Amboy.

He had heard of the murder and concluded that possibly his two strange passengers might know something about it. He carried the two men on his train to the Jersey City depot. When he reached there he summoned Special Railroad Officer Hill and confided to him his suspicious. Hill, assisted by Officer Poppin, arrested the men.

The men are now locked up in separate cells There appears to be no sign about either of them of having been engaged in a struggle, and no blood has been found upon either of them. The police have some doubt as to whether they have secured the murderers of Pauline Anderson, but the men will be held until the authorities are satisfied of their innocence. Neither of the prisoners can be induced to talk.

Pauline Anderson was a woman of fine physique and struggled violently for her life. It would have required the united efforts of both of the men in custody to have overcome her, and if they are the guilty persons they ought to show some evidences of a struggle. Their clothing will be minutely examined for traces of blood. Both of the wearner of the contract of the

But both parties were afraid that in the existing political conditions they could not afford to do (in the conditions they could not afford to do (in the coming campaign) without the money of the men who controlled the gold side of the question. And that fact had prevented a silver majority in the House and a silver majority in the Senate from passing some bill on the subject and drawing the question out of political controversy.

He believed that Senators could serve their country in the passent hour with more research.

NATIONAL UNIVERSITY.

ing. After the overture Rev. Dr. Hamlin of the Church of the Covenant delivered an invocation. He was followed by Representative Geo. F. Williams of Massachusetts, who delivered an eloquent opening address, which was frequently interrupted by applause. He and Dr. Hamlin were both presented with handsome flowers. Judge MacArthur, the chancellor of the university, then bestowed the degree of master of laws on the post graduate class and bachelor of laws on the senior class. The names of the graduates were announced by Mr. Eugene Carusi, secretary of the school. When he came to the name of Mr. Samuel D. Miller, son of the Attorney General, and private secretary to the Secretary of War, there was no response. Mr. Miller is in Minneapolis working with the Harrison men. THOSE WHO RECEIVED DEGREES.
